

was protected on the north by a small boulder, but was open to the south and east.—G. DOUGLAS KRUMBHAAR, Harvard University.

---

VIOLA PRIMULIFOLIA IN BERKSHIRE COUNTY, MASSACHUSETTS.—In June 1924 the writer, while on a botanical collecting trip in Otis township, Berkshire County, Massachusetts, found a colony of several hundred plants of Viola primulifolia L. along the south shore of Great Lake. This species is not included in the "Flora of Berkshire County," recently published by Mr. Ralph Hoffmann. Several of the plants collected were sent to Mr. Hoffmann for examination, and were later deposited by him in the herbarium of the New England Botanical Club.—O. M. FREEMAN, Bureau of Plant Industry, Washington, D. C.

Vol. 28, no. 330, including pages 89 to 112 and pl. 153, was issued 11 June, 1926.